

SAT PREP: 60 POINTS, 6 DAYS

Students engaged in Keystone Testing during their regularly scheduled English classes do not need to make up this material. Each of the 6 days of practice tests is awarded 10 points for effort--60 total.

Writing and Language

Day 1: 10 points effort

1. Guess SAT scores of celebrities and/or show scores needed to get into PA colleges.
2. Take a practice SAT writing section individually.
3. Convert scores to the 800 scale.

SAT pretest from the College Board Text, test 4. Page 690. 35 minutes

Day 2: 10 points effort

1. Read the Tested Concept Chart in this packet. Writing Concept Drill and Instruction.
2. Review some of the major concepts on the SAT ActivBoard file.
3. If time, do some MC questions on Khan Academy.

Day 3: 10 points effort

1. Review the tested concepts.
2. Complete as much of the “Formaldehyde Curtain” concept-coded simulation SAT as possible before 5 minutes remain in the period to give the answers. [individually]

TEXT LOGIC	RULE TO FOLLOW	SAMPLE QUESTION STEMS
Transition Logic: single-word or full-sentence transitions that create logical flow between paragraphs and ideas	Read the entire sentence or paragraph for context clues that indicate the most logical transitional word or sentence. EXAMPLE: I love you. [Therefore/However], I give you this rose. In this case, Therefore makes logical sense because it shows the cause-effect relationship between the feeling of love and the practice of rose-giving. The transition However would imply that giving roses is a sign of hatred, not love, in our culture.	A. NO CHANGE (Because of) B. Regardless of C. In contrast to D. In addition to To make this paragraph most logical, sentence 3 should be placed A) where it is now. B) before sentence 1. C) after sentence 1. D) after sentence 4.
Concluding Sentences	Make sure the concluding sentence summarizes or focuses on the main idea of the entire passage—not just one isolated part of it.	The writer wants a concluding sentence that restates the main argument of the passage. Which choice best accomplishes this goal? or The writer wants a conclusion that addresses the future of efforts to combat C.C.D. Which choice results in the passage having the most appropriate concluding sentence?
Main Idea and Relevant Supporting Sentences or Examples	Make sure every supporting sentence or example illustrates and is relevant to the main idea, tone, logical flow, or purpose of the entire passage.	Which choice provides a supporting example that reinforces the main point of sentence 4 of paragraph 3? or At this point, the writer is considering adding the following sentence. “Even fifteen-minute power naps improve alertness, creativity, and concentration.” Should the writer make this addition here?
Introductory or Opening Sentences	Make sure the introductory sentence is relevant to and consistent with the supporting ideas that follow it.	Which choice most smoothly and effectively introduces the writer’s discussion of studies of C.C.D. in this paragraph?
Graph Interpretation (related or unrelated to the text)	Make sure the text and the graphic data are consistent.	Which choice offers the most accurate interpretation of the data in the chart?

10 TIPS FOR SAT READING SUCCESS

TIP 1: KNOW THE QUESTION TYPES

Each of these question types assesses different skills in reading and analyzing a passage. Knowing how to recognize each type will help you decide which ones to answer first (the vocabulary items, because they are the quickest and easiest and will build your confidence early), which ones to answer last (the non-numbered main idea items, because the main idea will be so much clearer to you after you answer the specific line-numbered questions), and which ones will require you to seek specific evidence to support your answer (the two-part evidence-based questions.) Below are examples of the main types. Let's read the questions, then we'll watch a YouTube SAT expert guide us through his approach to answering them. Take notes in the space provided on any tips our expert offers.

D) most fundamental.

TIP 3: AVOID THE TRAP ANSWER

It is vital to remember is that even a single word can make an answer choice wrong. Every single word in each answer choice is put there by the SAT for a reason and that every question can be answered using details in the passage. If a single word in the answer choice isn't supported by the passage text, you need to eliminate it, even if the rest of the answer sounds good. Imagine you just read a passage talking about how human evolution shaped the environment. It gives a few examples. First, it talks about how the transition from earlier species like HOMO HABILUS to Neanderthals led to more tool usage like fire, which caused wildfires and shaped the ecology. It then talks about HOMO SAPIENS 40,000 years ago and their overhunting of species like woolly mammoths to extinction. So then we run into this question:

52

Which of the following best describes the main focus of the passage?

- A: The transition between HOMO HABILUS and Neanderthals [TOO SPECIFIC]
- B: The study of evolution [TOO BROAD]
- C: How the environment shaped human evolution [REVERSED RELATIONSHIP]
- D: The plausibility of evolution [UNRELATED CONCEPT]
- E: The world will be entirely devastated by man's actions [TOO EXTREME]
- F: homo sapiens emerged 40,000 years ago [TRUE BUT DOESN'T ANSWER THE Q.]
- G: The influence of human development on ecology [BINGO!]

As you're reading these answer choices, a few of them probably sound really plausible to you. Surprise! Each of the answers from A-F has something seriously wrong about it. Each one is a classic example of a wrong answer trap given by the SAT.

TRAP 1: WRONG ANSWER A: TOO SPECIFIC

A: The transition between homo habilus and Neanderthals

This type of wrong answer focuses on a smaller detail in the passage. It's meant to trick you because you might think to yourself, "well, I see this mentioned in the passage, so it's a plausible answer choice." You'll find that it's just way too specific to convey the point of the overall passage.

TRAP 2: WRONG ANSWER B: TOO BROAD

B: The study of evolution

This type of wrong answer has the opposite problem – it's way too broad. Yes, theoretically the passage concerns the study of evolution, but only one aspect of it, and especially as it relates to the impact on the environment. To give another ludicrous example, if you talked to your friend about your cell phone, and he said your main point was about the universe. Yes, you were talking about the universe, but only a tiny fraction of it. This is way too broad.

TRAP 3: WRONG ANSWER C: REVERSED RELATIONSHIP

C: How the environment shaped human evolution

This wrong answer choice can be tricky because it mentions all the right words. But of course the relationship between those words needs to be correct as well. Here, the relationship is flipped. Students who read too quickly make careless mistakes like these!

TRAP 4: WRONG ANSWER D: UNRELATED CONCEPT

D: The plausibility of evolution

This kind of wrong answer preys on the tendency of students to overthink the question. If you're passionate about arguing about evolution, this might be a trigger answer since ANY discussion of evolution becomes a chance to argue about the plausibility of evolution. Of course, this concept will appear nowhere in the passage, but some students just won't be able to resist. Do you see the point? On the surface, each of the answer choices sounds possibly correct. A less prepared student would think that all of these were plausible answers. But plausible isn't good enough. The right answer needs to be 100%, totally right. Wrong answers might be off by even one word - you need to eliminate these.

Trap 5: WRONG ANSWER E: TOO EXTREME

E. entirely devastated

These answer choices use words like "always, never, best, most, only, absolutely, entirely, all, every" or any other words that suggests a too-forceful, too all-encompassing, too-oversimplified response.

Trap 6: IT'S TRUE BUT DOESN'T ANSWER THE QUESTION

F. homo sapiens emerged 40,000 years ago

These are also tricky since it will give you information which is factually true [and you may actually know a lot about the topic!] but the information simply does not answer the question.

Now, take a few notes on the Traps uncovered in the following YouTube clips addressing the 2015 PSAT exam:

TIP 4: SKIM THE PASSAGE, THEN DO THE QUESTIONS.

In your prep for the SAT, you may have read different strategies for how to read a passage and answer questions. Some students read the questions before reading the passage. Others read the passage in detail first. Here is the best strategy:

- Do any vocabulary items first, even before reading the passage. These are quick and easy and will build your confidence.
- Skim the passage. Read every line, but don't try to understand every single line or try to write notes predicting what the questions will be. Just get a general understanding of the passage. You want to try to finish reading the passage in 4 minutes, if possible.
- Next, go to the questions. If the question refers to a line number, then go back to that line number and understand the text around it. If you can't answer a question within 30 seconds, skip it and save it till last. Don't be afraid to skip around. You can come back to it later, and for now it's more important to get as many points as possible. Ultimately, take a guess—leave nothing blank!
- If you follow these guidelines, you will have about 50-seconds per question to finish on time.

This strategy is a revelation for students who used to close-read a passage and run out of time. This skimming method works because the questions will ask about far fewer lines than the passage actually contains. For example, lines 5-20 of a reading passage might not be relevant to any question that follows. Therefore, if you spend time trying to deeply understand lines 5-20, you'll be wasting time. By taking the opposite approach of going back to the passage when you need to refer to it, you guarantee reading efficiency. You're focusing only on the parts of the passage that are important to answering questions. Critical Skill: You must be able to skim effectively. This means being able to quickly digest a text without having to slowly read every word. By reading the passage closely, you absorb a lot of details that aren't even useful for answering the questions.

TIP 5: READ THE ITALICIZED PASSAGE BLURB

This is a quick tip that many students ignore. Each passage comes with an italicized introduction, like this:

Questions 10-15 are based on the following passage.

The following passage is an excerpt from a 1909 novel. Georgia, the main character, is a reporter in an otherwise all-male newsroom.

Georgia was to be married. It was the week before Christmas, and on the last day of the year she would become Mrs. Joseph Tank. She had told Joe that if

The blurb gives you context for the entire passage, making skimming more meaningful and allowing you to answer main idea types of questions more effectively.

TIP 6: TELL YOURSELF YOU'RE REALLY INTERESTED IN THE PASSAGE SUBJECT MATTER

The SAT has passages about a lot of weird topics. Victorian novels, underwater basket-weaving, and the evolution of gerbils are all fair game. It's unlikely that you're naturally thrilled about all the subjects you'll read about. This makes it easy to tune out when you're reading the passage. This makes it harder to answer the questions, which will make you more frustrated. Instead, adopt this mindset: For the next 10 minutes, I am the world's most passionate person about whatever subject this passage is about. Force yourself to care about what the passage is telling you. Pretend that someone's holding a puppy hostage if you don't answer enough questions correctly. If you try to stay engaged while reading, you'll understand the passage better and you'll answer questions with way more accuracy.

TIP 7: EXPAND YOUR VOCABULARY IN 3 ENCOUNTERS

Flash cards typically get way too much attention from students. It feels good to study vocab flashcards because it seems like you're making progress. "I studied 1,000 vocab words - this must mean I improved my score!" Here is what you need to know to learn vocab effectively. You need three encounters with a word in different contexts to drive it from short to long-term memory. When you first learn it, pronounce it so you feel comfortable using it—then use it for the first encounter in some memorable way, perhaps by complimenting someone with it—or insulting him if he's a good sport willing to partake in some two-way vocab-bashing. For your second encounter, string several words together in a story in your head the next day—the story does not need to make total sense; just add sentences sequentially from your list until you've expended them all. Third, use the word in a real context—in an essay you are writing, in a conversation, in a book you are reading, and if all else fails, rehearse, rehearse, rehearse in a solo or group vocab quiz-jam session.

TIP 8: IF YOU FINISH WITH EXTRA TIME, DOUBLE CHECK

Your goal at the end of all this work is to get so good at SAT Reading that you solve every question and have extra time left over at the end of the section to recheck your work. What's the best way to double check your work? Double-check any questions you marked that you're unsure of. Try hard to eliminate answer choices. If it's a reading passage question, make sure that the passage supports your answer. If I'm 100% sure I'm right on a question, I mark it as such and never look at it again. If I'm not sure, I'll come back to it on the third pass. At least 2 minutes before time's up, I rapidly double-check that I bubbled the answers correctly. I try to do this all at once so as not to waste time looking back and forth between the test book and the answer sheet. Go 5 at a time ("A D E C B") for more speed. If you notice yourself spending more than 30 seconds on a problem and aren't clear how you'll get to the answer, skip and go to the next question.

TIP 9: ANSWER FIRST, BUBBLE LATER & SCRIBBLE UP THAT BOOKLET!

Here's a bubbling tip that will save you 2 minutes per section. When I first started test taking in high school, I did what many students do: after I finished one question, I went to the bubble sheet and filled it in. Then I solved the next question. Finish question 1, bubble in answer 1. Finish question 2, bubble in answer 2. And so forth. This actually wastes a lot of time. You're distracting yourself between two distinct tasks - solving questions, and bubbling in answers. This costs you time in both mental switching costs and in physically moving your hand and eyes to different areas of the test. Here's a better method: solve all your questions first in the book, then bubble all of them in at once. This has several huge advantages: you focus on each task one at a time, rather than switching between two different tasks. You also eliminate careless entry errors, like if you skip question 7 and bubble in question 8's answer into question 7's slot. By saving just 10 seconds per question, you get back 200 seconds on a section that has 20 questions. This is huge.

In the spirit of writing directly in the booklet, freely cross out wrong answer choices as you eliminate them, place question marks by questions that you are not certain about, make note, underline—whatever helps. After all, you bought the book (it wasn't cheap) and it gets thrown out after the test is over.

TIP 10: NEVER, EVER, EVER (uh, Taylor Swift?)...READ THE DIRECTIONS

Practice so much you know what to do...in the test room on test day, you'll know the kids who never practiced before the test. You'll be on question #4, and they'll still be reading the directions.
